STRUGGLE WITH BILL

Realize That Trend of Taxation is Likely to be Upward

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12—Having rejected Secretary Mellon's proposal for the abolition of all income surtaxes above 25 percent the administration senators who constitute a majority of the Senate finance committee are seriously contemplating today the "scrapping" of other parts of the Mellon tax plan. With two Republican committee members—Senators La Follette of Wisconsin and Smoot of Utah—threatening to carry their opposition to the administration's $3,200,000,000 tax program to the Senate, the administration members are worried over the danger of a long, hard fight over taxation.

They hope to have a new edition of the House tax bill ready for the Senate when that body reconvenes on September 21, but, when they settled down today to writing one, they admitted the difficulties of the task before them.

Treasury experts estimate that the amount of revenue the House Bill would raise in 1922 would be $2,960,000,000 while, under the present act, it would be $3,200,000,000. The administration senators have agreed to use Mellon's estimate of $3,200,000,000 as the basis of their bill.

Months ago Republican leaders of Congress realized that the trend of taxation was more likely to be upward than downward. But a revenue bill of $3,200,000,000 is disconcerting to them, especially with next year's congressional election already looming large on the political horizon. Hence the probability that even if Senator Penrose and his Republican colleagues who dominate the Senate Finance Committee decide to write much of the Mellon tax plan into the House Bill, that an alliance between the Republican independent element and the Democrats of congress may force a marked modification of it before a revenue revision measure is sent to the President for his approval.

Spiker Lovenest Is

Shattered At Last

BALTIMORE Md., Sept. 12—Another chapter was written today in the internationally famous romance of a young English war mother, an errand husband, a forgiving wife and the brother who offered himself on the altar of matrimony seeking to right a wrong and give abode to the former sweetheart of his kin, when it became known that Mrs. Emily Knowles Spiker, wife of Guy S. Spiker, of this city, and mother of the now nearly two years old son of Perley R. Spiker, her husband's brother, is missing from her home with no trace of her whereabouts, although she is still believed to be in Baltimore.

It is said that Mrs. Spiker fled from her East Baltimore home several weeks ago leaving a note informing her husband that she no longer cared for him, and according to friends of (Continued on Page Four.)

Galaxy of Attorneys Plan Fight to Free Arbuckle

By ELLIS MARTIN

Staff Correspondent I. N. S.
SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 12—Roscoe Conklin Arbuckle today faced a charge of murder in open court.

Moving with unexpected swiftness, District Attorney Matthews B. Ready ordered Arbuckle's case placed on the calendar for today.

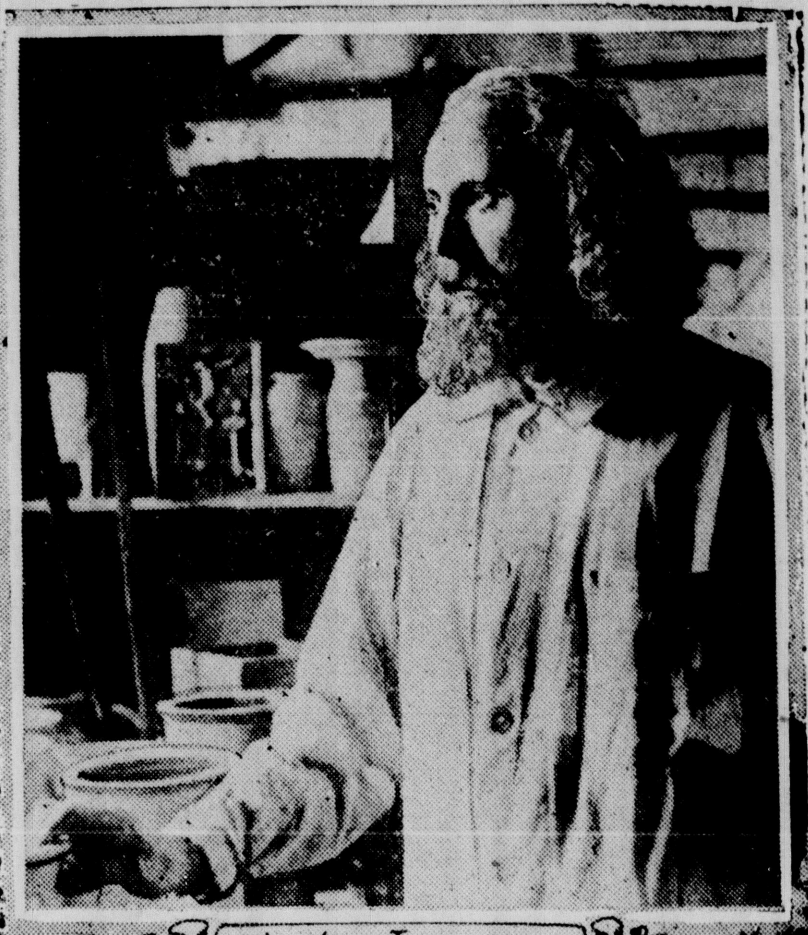

Counsel for Arbuckle were in counsel early today but their rigidly enforced rule of silence was followed so it could not be learned what moves they contemplate today to bring about the freedom of their client. It was considered possible they might demand a preliminary hearing upon arraignment in an effort to force the testimony of the state into the open.

A battle of wits, money and influence was under way today to save Roscoe Conklin ("Patty") Arbuckle from the gallows.

Rallying to the support of the state in its effort to convict the Falstaff of the movies, friends of Virginia Rappe, "most beautifully dressed woman in the movies," with whose murder Arbuckle stands charged, demanded that "justice be done."

And in behalf of the "life of the party" as Arbuckle was known not only in real life but in a recently enacted comedy, a great galaxy of le-

Oberammergau Preparing To Stage Next Passion Play 1922

Anton Lang, the potter of Oberammergau, has been cast for the role of Christ, in the great Passion Play and has already made this role famous. The photograph shows Lang at work in his shop. Oberammergau has not staged its famous Passion Play since 1910 and is now preparing to give its next performance in 1922. The Passion Play was first produced in 1633, following the Thirty Years' War, and was an offering to the Lord in supplication for relief from the dread pestilence that had swept through Southern Bavaria in the wake of that great religious war. The Passion Play was then produced every ten years without a break, according to the vow of the people of Oberammergau. The great war interrupted its regular production for the first time in the play's history.

Courier's Hospital Forum

Opinions of residents of Bristol and vicinity as to the advisability of establishing a smaller Community Hospital here to replace the Harriman institution, which was found too expensive to operate.

A free and open discussion of the subject through these columns is solicited.

Today the Board of Managers of the Harriman Hospital are mailing a circular letter to residents of this section, which reads as follows:

Dear Sir:

The Harriman Hospital was closed September 1st after ten months operation because it was found that the institution, as constructed, was too large and unsuitable for our needs.

During the ten months it was operated under Community control 313 house patients were treated and cared for, in addition a goodly number of minor accident cases not requiring hospitalization. Among the first class, we have a considerable number of emergency cases requiring immediate attention whose lives were saved and who, had they been required to travel to Philadelphia or Trenton, might have died.

This proves to us the need of a hospital in our midst. We feel we have enough money remaining in the treasury to maintain a suitable cottage hospital for nine or ten months, possibly a year. We have in view a house in Pine Grove, adjoining Bristol Borough on the east, directly on the Delaware—an admirably suited location for a Hospital, which would require about $3000 to make it a comfortable suitable place for such an institution.

gal talent was grimly battling for his freedom.

From District Attorney Matthew B. Ready came the formal statement: "The evidence in my possession shows conclusively either that an assault or an attempted assault was perpetrated upon Miss Virginia Rappe by Roscoe Arbuckle. Section 189 of the Penal Code provides that the taking of a human life by any person in the commission of an assault or an attempted assault is murder in the first degree.

"I desire to state that I will spare no effort to punish the perpetrator of this atrocious crime although I know I will be opposed by the cleverest lawyers and the greatest influence which money can purchase."

Milton Cohen, Arbuckle's personal attorney, who is in charge of his defense; Frank Dominguez, noted Los Angeles criminal lawyer; Charles Brennan and former Judge Thomas P. White, local attorneys who have been retained, refused to comment upon Arbuckle's plight and on their instructions, Arbuckle's own lips were locked. Upon written instructions from "Patty" to the jailer, no one but his attorneys and his manager, Lou Anger, were admitted to his cell.

Three Services Held in Observance of Church's 111th Anniversary

LOCAL PASTOR THERE

Three services commemorating the 111th anniversary of the Bensalem Methodist Church yesterday attracted large audiences and were of exceptional interest.

There was a good attendance at the morning service when the Rev. Dr. William Powick, Dean of Norristown Business College, preached. Dr. Powick delivered a powerful sermon, taking his text from Heb. 4:16.

Members of the choir of Hulmeville Methodist Church furnished the music. The collection taken totaled over $54.

At the conclusion of the morning service, there was a luncheon served to visitors remaining over for the afternoon meeting. The luncheon was spread on tables on the lawn and over 50 people sat down. The ladies of the Bensalem church had the affair in charge.

Yesterday afternoon at three o'clock the Rev. J. J. Bingham, of Bristol Methodist Church was the speaker. Mr. Bingham delivered a timely sermon on "Jesus, the Power of God." The choir of Cornwells Methodist Church sang a number of selections.

Last evening's service marked the close of the day's program. The Rev. Dr. J. C. Petrie of St. Luke's Church, Philadelphia was the speaker. A delegation of 25 members of the choir of Bristol Methodist church attended and rendered an attractive musical program. The choir made the trip to the church in a motor truck.

Declares Jail Has No Terrors For Martindell

Lecturer Says Indicted Chiropractor Will Continue Practice Here

FLAYS PROSECUTION

Declares Local Practitioner Will "Go to Prison for a Principle"

Applause of several minutes duration greeted the declaration made from the stage of the Forrest Theatre yesterday afternoon that Dr. W. B. Martindell will accept a jail sentence, if found guilty and sentenced by the court. Dr. Martindell, chiropractor, is under indictment and will be tried on Thursday next, at Doylestown, on a charge of practicing medicine in Bristol, without being licensed.

"Dr. Martindell is convicted, he will not close his office and depart from Bristol," declared Dr. James Greggerson, a fellow chiropractor and the orator of the afternoon. "Dr. Martindell's office will be open and he will accept the sentence that is imposed upon him and will go to jail—for his principles.

"We chiropractors have a message to deliver and we are going to deliver that message even if they take us and put us in jail. That will not extinguish nor diminish the fires of our enthusiasm."

There were about four hundred people in the Forrest Theatre yesterday afternoon, to hear Dr. Greggerson, who proved himself a forceful orator, and a vigorous defender of his fellow practitioner who is to be tried this week. Dr. Greggerson hailed from Davenport, Iowa, the so-called "Fountain Head" of Chiropractic, and is engaged in lecture work for the chiropractic cult.

During the course of his address he flayed "the Doctor's Trust," thus denigrating the American Medical Association, which he accused of persecuting the chiropractors. He said that the medical doctors were maintained a combination not so much in taint a combination not so much in restraint of trade as in restraint of healing.

"The medical doctors say that chiropractic is a fake, yet they say that they do not object to anyone practicing chiropractic if that person will take a course in medicine. If Chiropractic is a fake, how much education must one have to be allowed to practice a fake? They say to the chiropractor: 'We will let you practice if you will pass educational standards that we set.' If it is a fake, is it any better in the hands of a man who is educated than in the hands of one not educated? And how much education do you have to have in order to be allowed to think like the medical man?"

The medical men assert that they know nothing about chiropractic, yet the medical men assert that they will pass upon my qualifications to practice chiropractic. Will the medical men permit me to pass upon their qualifications to practice medicine? Why, no! no! no! because I know nothing about medicine. For medical men to assume to pass upon the qualifications of chiropractors is comparable to having a horseshoer examine an artist; a Presbyterian minister a Catholic priest.

"The way for the medical men to get rid of Dr. Martindell is for them to cure up the people who are coming to them before they come to him. Then he would have no patients and have no excuse to practice.

"They charge Dr. Martindell with practicing medicine, and I say that Dr. Martindell did not practice medicine, nor does he want to practice medicine, for medicine and chiropractic have nothing in common."

The speaker caustically arraigned the practice of vaccination and serum injection and denominated chiropractic as "this wonderful secret of health."

Besides a sympathetic audience, there was assembled a large quota of Dr. Martindell's fellow practitioners from other cities. Among these were Dr. Ruland W. Lee, of Newark, who presided; Drs. John F. and Francis E. Kent; of Newark; Dr. George H. Bradley and Dr. A. W. Marchand, of Philadelphia; Dr. F. J. and J. T. Bryan of Jersey City; Dr. Fred E. Conover of West New York, N. J.; Dr. P. J. Rohr, of Union Hill, N. J.; Dr. J. C. Marsh, Dr. Joseph I. Hamel, of North Bergen, N. J.; Dr. C. C. Belton, of Philadelphia; Dr. P. A. Lorenzo, of Trenton, and Dr. Charles B. Vliet, of Asbury Park.

It was announced at the meeting that a special trolley car will convey Dr. Martindell's witnesses, patients and sympathizers to Doylestown on Thursday morning, for the trial. It will leave Bath and Otter streets at 8 a. m.

Typhoid Fever Exists In Bristol, Says New Warning

The presence of ten cases of typhoid in Bucks County and one in Bristol makes the danger of typhoid more imminent than ever, say the local health authorities. Warning was repeated today to every person in Bristol to redouble their guard against contracting the disease. Boiling the drinking water is but one precaution. Extra care, the health authorities say should be taken as to bathing in the river, canal and other streams, for typhoid contagion is particularly prevalent at this time in such bodies of water.

Unveils a Footstone At Friend's Grave

Former Associates of W. H.
Wright Make Pilgrimage Here

MASONIC CEREMONIES

Splendid tribute to a former resident of Bristol whose body now lies in the graveyard of St. James Protestant Episcopal Church was paid yesterday afternoon by a group of business associates of the deceased.

Some thirty former business associates of the late William Harry Wright, of Newark, toured to Bristol in automobiles and unveiled a footstone which they had placed at the grave of their deceased friend and co-worker.

The ceremonies were unostentatious and impressive. Members and friends of the family of Mr. Wright attended.

The delegation of visitors arrived at about 2:45 o'clock. They had been associated with Mr. Wright in the business house where he was employed for ten years and had learned to love him. After his death they desired to make some physical expression of their friendship, and the placing of the footstone on his grave is that manifestation.

The stone is plain in design and of granite. An inscription, "Lafayette Lodge, No. 19, Washington, D. C.," along with the Masonic emblem, decorates its surface. It corresponds with the headstone placed by the family.

Upon the arrival of the delegation, the visitors walked from the Walnut street entrance of the yard to the grave with uncovered heads. A small silk American flag, weighted down with a silver miniature mason's trowel, was placed over the stone.

The men formed themselves into a square and members of the deceased's family stood in the centre.

There was scripture reading by Mr. B. C. Brown, followed by an eulogy of Mr. Wright by W. W. Windward. Mr. Windward was associated for many years with Mr. Wright and he spoke from a friendship welded into everlasting strength.

"Harry Wright was dependable, he was a warm friend and no evil lives after him," said the speaker.

Mr. L. M. LaVake spoke briefly and told of his relationship with Mr. Wright. Mr. LaVake said that Mr. Wright lived a true Masonic life. "He lived on the level and departed on the square."

The Lord's Prayer was recited in unison and the son of the deceased expressed the appreciation of his mother and himself for the honors paid husband and father.

The delegation was composed of various Masonic bodies and all the visitors are employees of the same firm which employed Mr. Wright in Newark, N. J.

Take Movies Of Inventor's Son Beside Old Movie Device

Edward Lynn, chief operator of the "movie" machine at the Forrest Theatre and chief operator of the "movie" machine for Henry Star Richardson, secretary of the Pennsylvania Board of Censors, in Philadelphia, is to appear in the movies.

Mr. Lynn's likeness will be shown in all parts of the world. Yesterday he was filmed by three of the largest movie news concerns in the world—Pathe, Fox and Selznick.

The three companies sent operators to Bristol yesterday to film Mr. Lynn and the movie machine which was invented by Mr. Lynn's father, Cortland Lynn, in 1877, and which, it is claimed, was the first movie machine to be made in the United States.

Cortland Lynn, father of Edward Lynn, conducted a tinsmith shop on the present site of the Forrest Theatre.

The movie camera "took" Mr. Lynn and the old machine in numerous poses. The film will be shown throughout the United States and foreign countries. Bristol will get a lot of free advertising as being the home of the first movie projecting machine in the United States.

The pictures were staged to the rear of the Forrest Theatre, where the machine has been on exhibition during Paramount Week.

THE POSTAL SERVICE

Heralded in advance as a humanizing public officer, Postmaster General Hays received an ovation at the annual convention of the National Letter Carriers' Association, in St. Louis. The delegates, numbering several thousand, cheered him for six minutes.

Strange and incredible Mr. Hays' fervid remarks on the sanctity of workmen's rights and welfare must have seemed, in the personal, to the cautious executives of slowly changing corporations, enchainment by the rigorous policy of the aristocracy of vested interest and the dependency of the wage-earning, human factor. Here was the head of the Postoffice Department, earnestly stating that conservative organizations of employees were preventatives of anarchy, and heartily assuring the letter carrier that the public service in his department would be a loyal partnership between officers and men. The 300,000 employees, he declared would not work for him, but with him.

The Postmaster General said that he was in favor of pensions, and a welfare organization, a real merit system, complete and final abrogation of political consideration in the service, investigations as to occupational diseases and the building of a hospital, and a voice for labor in those phases of the business which concern working conditions and adequate wage. These were a few of his promises relating to the human aspect of the postal service.

Mr. Hays accentuated the brotherhood of man and the human phase of work. "The postal establishment is most certainly not an institution of profit, nor for politics, but an institution for service." "The organization of capital and labor naturally go hand in hand." "The idea that labor is a commodity was abandoned 1921 years ago last Easter." "The merit system shall control without any subterfuge." "Exact justice for labor, exact justice for capital, exact justice for the public."

The force, directness and clearness of the Postmaster General's deliberate assertions left no doubt that he is determined to operate the department as a business institution and free it totally of politics, secure most efficient service, recognize fully the human element in the work, and cultivate an esprit de corps based on the practical ideals of partnership between officials and subordinates.

Mr. Hays has undertaken fundamental measures of the greatest importance in the way of patriotism, as well as of efficiency. But he will realize most of his objects. The democracy of his policy and methods will reward him with success.

SHALL WE SIGHT LIFE?

Marconi believes that long sound waves which have struck the antennae of his wireless apparatus while he has been cruising in the Mediterranean Sea may have emanated from the planet Mars. The waves are unlike any which have been produced heretofore by any earthly sound. Marconi is continuing with his experiments, but recently has heard nothing resembling a message from another part of the spacious firmament.

An American scientist resident in France, B. McAfee, has invented a mercurial mirror with which, in unison with a gigantic telescope, he expects to take close-up, snapshot photographs of Mars. The telescope, which will be fifty feet in diameter, will be placed in a mine shaft at Chanaral, Chile, over which Mars will be at its zenith four times in 1924. The mirror will be a flat, sheet-iron disc, fifty feet in diameter, coated with mercury, and the disc will rotate at a velocity to effect the necessary concavity of the mercury. Mr. McAfee says a magnification of 25,000,000 will be possible, bringing Mars within a mile and a half of the earth.

There are more mansions in the sky than human vision has ever sighted. They are millions of miles away, so far that the largest look like mere specks in the heavens, so distant that perhaps the biggest and brightest are invisible. It is not likely that man will ever soar to any of them, yet it is among the probabilities that we shall find out what a few of them are and whether they are inhabited. The great universe, infinite in its vastness, is one of the mysteries to which there is but one portal of undertaking—the grave and its immortality.

MAY THEY NEVER BE CLOSED

Commemorating a century of peace between the United States and Canada, the Peace Portal was dedicated at Blaine, Washington, on Tuesday. This arch of steel and concrete, on the international boundary, half on Canadian and half on American soil, is the open door of the Pacific highway, running from Vancouver, in British Columbia, to La Juana, in Lower California, Mexico. The road connects the arctic zone in Canada with the torrid in Mexico, traversing three peaceful countries.

The Peace Portal is a permanent reminder of the fact that there are no fortifications along the 3,000 miles of border between the United States and Canada, and no hawk-like military forces. "May These Doors Never Be Closed" and "Open for One Hundred Years" are two of the inscriptions.

Had forts been constructed along the international boundaries, and standing armies kept suspicious watch across the dividing line, the United States and Canada would have distrusted each other and the soldiers would have yearned for battle. As in Europe armament and misunderstandings would have resulted in conflict.

BOARDING HOUSE AUTOMOBILE

An automobile that may be kept beside the bed at night, like a pet dog, or pushed into a corner near the dresser, has been made by an American aviator for a French duke. It is of about the size of a St. Bernard or a Great Dane; in fact, it is smaller than the largest of these massive breeds of canines.

The unique car is three feet long and two and a half feet high, and is capable of a speed of sixty miles an hour.

The de Cazes car is only a novelty, yet it is not to be despised. It would be economical and convenient for the average person to have a little automobile in which to run to and from his office, store, or factory. The urban transportation problem is still unsolved, and it may be solved by some kind of a flivver.

MIGRATION OF HOBOES

The secretary and treasurer of the Hobo Welfare Association have written from their summer general offices in Chicago to Mayor Kiel, of St. Louis, that 12,000 will spend two weeks in St. Louis about October 20 on their way to New Orleans, their winter resort and headquarters.

These gentlemen of leisure and poverty, of rags and irresponsibility migrate, like wild geese, as seasonal changes affect their peculiar instincts, and rough winter's approach drives them to the soft and lazy climate of the sunny South. They turn their backs to the cold blasts of the Great Lakes and their faces to the balmy breezes of the Mexican Gulf.

THE WAY IT LOOKS TO THE FARMER

Letters To The Editor

Voter Cannot Change His Enrollment

Editor of the Courier.
 Sir:—

In a recent issue of a Bristol newspaper, there appeared an editorial which will no doubt do much harm by creating a false conception of the qualifications of electors at the coming primary election. It gives an absolutely erroneous interpretation of the Party Enrollment Act of July 25th, 1913.

The editorial, in its first paragraph is correct in stating that an elector, when enrolled, becomes a member of that particular political party in which he enrolls and remains a member of that party until he voluntarily changes his enrollment, in the proper manner and at the proper time. By so enrolling himself, he is entitled to vote at the primaries for the candidates upon the ballot of the party in which he is enrolled only. The elector can only make a change in his enrollment through the registry assessor, at the time provided for making such changes.

The second paragraph of the editorial is absolutely erroneous. If an elector was enrolled in a certain party at a preceding election and that party has, in the meanwhile, disbanded, or has failed to put forward a ticket for the coming primary, that elector cannot vote for the candidates of any other party. He loses his vote, unless he has, in the meanwhile changed his enrollment to a party which has a ticket in the field. The very plain reason is that to allow an elector to switch his party affiliation when he comes to the primary polling place would defeat the purposes of the Party Enrollment Act.

Section 5 of that Act reads as follows:—

If an elector has at any time received party enrollment under the provisions of this act, it shall be the duty of the registry assessor to insert in the said registry, from year to year, at the time of making the annual assessment, said party enrollment, after the name of the said elector, until such time as a certificate of enrollment is presented to or filed with him by the said elector, to a contrary effect. Sect. 6.

Section 6 of the Act reads as follows:—

If an elector in districts, other than cities of the first, second or third classes, enrolled as a member of a party is challenged at the primaries as to his party enrollment, he shall make oath before

Hebrides Not All Glorious

Occasionally there is a sun in the Hebrides, writes a traveler. Then the Highlander sees beauty. The wild coast grass a brown-green, its sea birds a snowy white and the ocean with its innumerable waves sparkling blue. And on summer nights, when the fishermen go forth, the phosphorescent glow offers a splendid sight. "A stream of fire ran off each side from the bows," says MacCulloch, "and the ripple of the wake was spangled with the glowworms of the deep. Every oar dropped diamonds, every fishing line was a line of light, the iron cable went down in a torrent of flame, and the plunge of the anchor resembled an explosion of lightning."

Bananas Grow Pointing Upward.

A bunch of bananas, as displayed in a store is hung just opposite from the way it grows. Bananas grow with their free ends pointing upward. The herb on which the fruit grows has an underground stem which sends up suckers or sprouts that attain their full growth in a year and a half or two years. Its "trunk" is not really a trunk at all, but a false stalk formed by the curled bases of the leaves, which wrap themselves about the flower stem. This stalk, almost a foot in diameter at the bottom, rises to a height of from ten to forty feet, its great leaves, a foot or two in width and from six to ten feet in length, drooping outward. When the plant has reached its full growth there appears a huge flower bud, which opens and shows a bunch of little purple flowers, each of which makes way for a tiny banana. The great flower cluster hangs toward the earth, but as the separate fruits begin to grow they turn upward. From 50 to 150 bananas, weighing altogether from 40 to 100 pounds, may grow in a bunch.

How Camel Got His Harelip.

In "The Women of Egypt" Mrs. Elizabeth Cooper, the author, says that when she decided to ride a camel and he was brought to the door she tried to make friends with him, and continued:

"I walked around him and examined him closely. He smiled at me with his harelip, which, if tales are true, he obtained legitimately. When Allah created the first camel he was lonely and went around moaning and groaning over his fate. It was then that a distinguishing mark of all camels, Allah became sorry for him, seeing what a fine disposition was being ruined, so he sent a genie to tell him that a spouse was being created for him. The news delighted the lonely camel so intensely that he smiled and smiled until he split his lip, and it has remained thus ever since."

She was twenty, undisciplined and exacting. She had no reserves within herself to which she could turn. Bad things were hopelessly bad with Cherry; her despairs were the dark and fearful despairs of girlhood, prematurely transferred to graver matters.

Martin was quite right in some of his contentions; girl-like, she was spasmodic and unsystematic in her housekeeping; she had times of being discontented and selfish. She hated economy and the need for careful managing.

In October Alix chanced to write her a long and unusually gossipy letter. Alix had a new gown of black grenadine, and she had sung at an afternoon tea, and had evidently succeeded in her first venture. Also they had had a mountain climb and enclosed were snapshots Peter had taken on the trip.

Cherry picked up the little kodak prints; there were four or five of them. She studied them with a pang at her heart. Alix in a loose rough coat, with her hair blowing in the wind and the peaked crest of Tamalpais behind her—Alix busy with lunch boxes—Alix standing on the old bridge by the mill. A wave of homesickness swept over the younger sister; life tasted bitter. She hated Alix, hated Peter; above all she hated herself. She wanted to be there, in Mill Valley, free to play and to dream again—

A day or two later she told Martin kindly and steadily that she thought it had all "been a mistake." She told him that she thought the only dignified thing to do was to part. She liked him; she would always wish him well, but since the love had gone out of their relationship, surely it was only honest to end it.

"What's the matter?" Martin demanded. "Nothing special," Cherry assured him, her eyes suddenly watering. "Only I'm tired of it all. I'm tired of pretending. I can't argue about it. But I know it's the wise thing to do." "You'd go back to your father, I suppose?" Martin said, yawning.

"Until I could get into something," Cherry replied with dignity. A vague thought of the stage flitted through her mind.

"Oh!" Martin said politely. "And I suppose you think your father would agree to this delightful arrangement?" he asked.

"I know he would," Cherry answered eagerly.

"All right—you write and ask him!" Martin agreed good-naturedly. Cherry was surprised at his attitude, but grateful more than surprised.

"Not cross, Martin?" she asked. "Not the least in the world!" he answered lightly.

"Because I truly believe that we'd both be happier—" the woman said hesitatingly. Martin did not answer.

The next day she sat down to write her father. She meditated, with a troubled brow. Her letter was unexpectedly hard to compose. She could not take a bright and simple tone, asking her father to rejoice in her homecoming. Somehow the matter persisted in growing heavy and the words twisted themselves about into ugly and selfish sounds. Cherry was young, but even to her youth the phrases, the "misunderstood" and the "uncongenial," the "friendly parting before any bitterness creeps in," and the "free to decide our lives in some happier and wiser way," rang false. Pauline had been divorced a few years ago, and the only thing Cherry disliked in her friend was her cold and resentful references to her first husband.

No, she couldn't be a divorced woman. It was all spoiled, the innocent past and the future; there was no way out! She gave up the attempt at a letter and began to annoy Martin with talk of a visit home again.

"What you want to go for?" "Oh, just—just—Cherry's irrepressible tears angered herself almost as much as they did Martin. "I think they'd like me to!" she faltered.

"Go if you want to!" he said, but she knew she could not go on that word.

"That's it," she said at last to herself, in one of her solitary hours. "I'm married and this is marriage. For the rest of my life it'll be Mart and I—Mart and I—in everything! For richer, for poorer; for better, for worse—that's marriage. He doesn't beat me and we have enough money, and perhaps there are a lot of other women worse off than I am. But it's—it's funny."

CHAPTER IX.

In January, however, he came home one noon to find her hatted and wrapped to go.

"Oh, Mart—it's Daddy!" she said. "He's ill—I've got to see him! He's awfully ill."

"Telegram?" asked Martin, not particularly pleased, but not unsympathetic, either.

For answer she gave him the yellow paper that was wet with her tears.

For Answer She Gave Him the Yellow Paper That Was Wet With Tears.

"Dad ill," he read. "Don't worry. Come if you can, Alix."

"I'll bet it's a put-up job between you and Alix—" Martin said in indignant suspicion.

Her indignant glance sobered him; he hastily arranged money matters and that night she got off the train in the dark wetness of the valley, and was met by a rush of cool and fragrant air. Cherry got a driver, rattled and jerked up to the house in a surrey and jumped out, her heart almost suffocating her.

Alix came flying to the door; the old lamplight and the odor of wood smoke poured through. There was no need for words; they burst into tears and clung together.

THEATRES

New Colonial Theatre

A circus story with all the romance of the "big top," thrilling encounters with wild animals, and the magnetic screen personality of Gladys Walton will be the principal attraction at the New Colonial Theatre tonight. It is called "The Man Tamer," and is a Universal special attraction in which the petite star of "Pink Tights," "Rich Girl, Poor Girl," and "All Dressed Up," does her most appealing work.

John Barton Oxford wrote the story and created a sensation with it in the "Red Book Magazine." It was adapted to the screen by A. P. Younger and filmed under the direction of Harry B. Harris.

As the story gets into action the star is shown as a circus girl, handling wild animals in an animal act with her father, a veteran of the arena. The father dies and the girl is forced to go it alone, battling for her living and her honor against tremendous and utterly discouraging odds. The heart wallop comes into the theme when she takes a wild young millionaire and tames him just as easily as she tames her wildest lion.

Roscoe Karns plays opposite the star. The role is not new to him, for he has been a trainer of jungle beasts for years. C. B. Murphy, Parker J. McConnell, William Welsh and C. Norman Hammond also have roles in keeping with their screen capabilities.

Forrest Theatre

Manager Wilson of the Forrest Theatre has arranged for a special production for showing at the Forrest Theatre tonight. The photoplay is entitled "The Fighter," starring that popular leading man Conway Tearle.

This production is running to full houses in New York and promises to be one of the best yet in which this star has appeared.

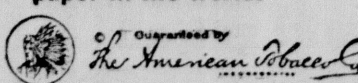

As an added attraction, there will be shown a side-splitting 2-reel comedy.

IMPORTANT STYLES FEATURED IN SLEEVES AND COLLARS

ONCE again embroidery and fur lend their rich and luxurious flavor to the new suits for fall and winter, and once again designers indicate their choice of these decorative features. Embroideries have been developed in ways new to us and fur collars have taken on added importance because of their novel and very becoming shapes. They invite one to snuggle down into their soft and cozy depths and between them and the equally soft and protecting hats that droop about the face, there is little chance for the cold to make headway against the merry eyes that can laugh at it.

Ever since a famous Paris designer introduced sleeves that are so large and so much emphasized by decoration that the rest of the garment becomes a mere background for them, sleeves have become more and more important in all outer garments. All sorts of embroideries find place on them—beads, silk, and especially the new braid embroideries. These rich embellishments invite the company of fur and a very handsome example of this new mode appears in the suit shown at the left of the two pictured. The coat has trim lines and reveals a conservative interpretation of the decorative sleeve, for some of these sleeves are huge with arm's-eyes extended nearly to the waistline. In this model the coat is almost knee length, cut with a slight flare in the skirt and much improved by large patch pockets. It is in that dark gray shade known as "sphinx" with cuffs and collar of dark beaver fur. Handsome bone buttons are something more than a fastening for it—a long, close-set row of them down the front makes the best possible finish for the embroidery.

Enormous Sharks.

Sharks grow to a tremendous size. Rondelet's shark, for instance, which is an inhabitant of tropical seas, attains a length of 40 feet. The great basking shark is even longer. A young fish of this species, brought to England and set up, is 17 feet in length. Full grown, this shark may measure 50 feet and rival the whales in girth and weight.

Sawfish have been killed 30 feet in length, and it is not for a moment to be supposed that we have secured the largest. The fact is that the natural history of the seas is still very largely a sealed book, and that surprises are still in store for future generations.

Not in His Calendar.

Little Dickie is an Episcopalian, and therefore accustomed to celebrating many church holidays. The other day he stood looking at the signs in the window of a closed drug store. He was thirsty, very thirsty, and longed for Monday to come when he might invest in something cool. Laboriously he spelled out the sign. "N-u-t-S-u-n-d-a-y." His countenance assumed a look of disgust.

"We?", he ejaculated, "I've heard of Ash Wednesday, Shrove Tuesday and Good Friday, but to have the drug store closed 'cause it's Nut Sunday is a new one on me. There's no collect for that day in the church book."

A Neighbor's Plan

One of your friends is quietly building up a snug little fortune. You will be surprised some day and wonder how he did it. But it is a very simple story.

This man does not have a large income. He has never made a large savings deposit in his life. Small deposits made every week is the secret of this man's success. His savings account shows a steady climb for years.

The average man fails to win because he is not willing to make small savings deposits, and make them as often as possible.

Most any one can see the importance of making a big deposit—but many fail to understand the value of the small ones.

Think it over. ONE DOLLAR WILL START A SAVINGS ACCOUNT WITH US.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Courier, through its membership in the International News Service, today concluded contracts which provide it with the most efficient world-wide news gathering facilities of any evening press association.

In addition to the large staff of American correspondents at foreign stations and the foreign service of the London Daily Express and the Sunday Express, which the Courier already receives exclusively in Bucks County, dispatches will now be received from the London Daily News and the London Star.

The International News Service has purchased the exclusive rights in the United States to all matter published in these great London dailies, and in this manner the Courier will also carry the main items of news of these great journals.

While the important news of the world is carried daily in the Courier, local news is always given preference. The Courier publishes more live and up-to-date local news than any other paper in Bucks County. Follow it for a week and judge it on its merits.

Egyptian Embalming.
Among the ancient Egyptians, whose civilization was the earliest we know about, embalming was practiced by all who could afford it for their dead. It required some ninety days, the body being steeped in natron 70 days, then washed inside and out, and treated with cedar oil, after which it was enveloped in linen bandages—at a cost of about $1,500. A cheaper process cost $300. How effective it was, the mummies in many museums attest after thousands of years.

KRAMER'S 3-BAGGER

By FRANCIS G. ELLIS
Bridesburg yesterday defeated Belfield of Germantown on Harriman Field 4-1.

Cotter, for Belfield, pitched a fine game after the opening inning. In that inning Bridesburg players hit his pitching hard, scoring all their runs on Kramer's three-bagger, two base hits by Fairburn and Kuhn, a single by R. Butts, a sacrifice fly and an error.

Flynn held the visitors scoreless in every inning but the eighth, when his own wild pitch allowed Peters to score, after making a three-bagger.

The fielding of Fairburn and Howell, the catching of "Paddy" Livingstone and the pitching of Flynn were the features.
